GINGER CURD RECIPE

To Make ginger curd you will need:

- 3 x 250ml capacity jam jars and lids
- silicone paper circles, cut to the size of the mouth of the jam jars
- fresh ginger- the piece I used was 140g
- the juice of 2 lemons
- 90g castor sugar
- 2 whole eggs and 2 egg yolks
- 75g unsalted butter
- 30g stem ginger chopped into small cubes about 5mm square
- I cook curd over a bain-marie so use a large heatproof bowl that sits snugly into the mouth of a saucepan filled with about an inch of water.

To begin: roughly peel the ginger and place into a food processor or hand blender. Add the juice from both the lemons and blend these ingredients to a pulp. Strain the pulp through a fine sieve so you are left with just the juice, this should measure roughly 100ml. Place the juice into the heatproof bowl along with the sugar, whole eggs and egg yolks and place the bowl onto the saucepan. Transfer to the hob and heat gently, whisking all the ingredients together.

The curd thickens as it cooks and is ready when it is thick enough to coat the back of a spoon. This takes around 20 to 25 minutes. Once thickened turn off the heat and stir in the butter so you have a silky smooth mixture, lastly stir through the stem ginger.

Ginger curd is best stored in glass jam jars. To prepare the jars thoroughly wash them and their lids in hot soapy water. Rinse clean and place the jars on a baking tray. Transfer the tray into a pre-heated oven for 5-10 minutes until the jars are dry.

To finish: Decant the curd into a measuring jug and pour straight into the prepared jars while they are still hot. Place a silicone paper circle onto the top of the curd to create a seal and then screw the lid tightly onto the jar.

Adding the curd to the jar whilst both are still hot creates an airtight vacuum, sealing the curd as it cools preventing any bacterial contamination that could lead to mould. Leave the jars to cool completely
